

Lewis Wins One Flying Fall From Zbyszko, Thus Keeping His Heavyweight Crown

CROWD CHEERS LOSER LOUDLY; REFEREE BOOED

Veteran Leaves the Ring a Hero Despite Fact That He Lost.

Flying falls, recognized only in wrestling by the New York boxing commission, were barred at the Lewis-Zbyszko championship match at McNulty baseball park last night—but ask any spectator who saw the struggle and you'll be informed that it was only by a flying fall that Ed Lewis defeated the rugged veteran of 3,000 battles and thus retained his title.

It Was a Flying Fall.
After Lewis and Zbyszko had wrestled one hour, 28 minutes and 23 seconds of the two hours agreed upon for the match Lewis suddenly carried the aged Pole to the mat with the tenth headlock he had clamped on during the night. Zbyszko had no more than stepped the floor when referee Dick Davis, of Wichita, himself a heavy-weight grappler, reached over and pulled Lewis on the shoulder, thus declaring that the stranger had won. As neither could win another fall in the 28 1/2 minutes after the conclusion, Lewis was declared winner because of his one fall.

Pandemonium broke loose around the ringside and in the grandstand. Cheers sailed into the ring at the end of the first and only "throw him out," "get an honest referee," "rotten," and many other such shouts could be heard.

Crowd Cheers the Pole.
Lewis left the ring immediately after the fall and made his way to the dressing room for the rest period. Zbyszko, however, strode straight up and down, kicking on the ruling. He claimed it was a rolling fall if any fall at all, and that the rules, which he had read before the match, plainly barred such.

But Davis court refused to alter his decision. He said Lewis had won a straight pin fall, the wrestling rules provided that when a man's two shoulders were both on the mat at one time he was "down" and they didn't have to be kept there for "five or ten minutes" at any other length of time. However, whatever the rules may be, Tulsa fans had been given to understand that a contestant's shoulders must be down three seconds for a pin fall, and it was this that led the spectators into the bitter demonstration against Davis court.

Zbyszko was a much peevish grappler, and he plainly showed it. He went over to Davis court and challenged him on the spot. Those who were sitting nearby said "Zbyszko" guaranteed to throw the Wichita in three minutes during the intermission if he would get in a ring with him. Davis court declined this invitation.

The old Pole, his bald dome shining like an ivory billiard ball, then retreated to his corner and sat down and began wiping the perspiration off with a towel, ignoring the opportunity to go to his dressing room. He had been in his corner only a few minutes when the crowd began cheering him and soon he was compelled to get up and acknowledge the plaudits. No less than four such curtain calls were answered by the veteran as he waited for Lewis to return and renew hostilities.

No Second Fall.
Another misunderstanding arose at this stage. After 10 minutes had elapsed from the time Lewis was awarded the fall the timekeeper announced that he had been informed the rest period was 10 minutes, and that it was time to begin again. Referee Davis court, however, said the intermission was 20 minutes. It was exactly 24 minutes before Lewis returned and they resumed.

In the 24 1/2 minutes remaining neither could get any advantage. They spent most of the time on their feet sparring and roughing it. Zbyszko was loudly cheered at the end when Davis court hoisted Lewis' hand. Zbyszko raised his own hand and the spectators yelled in delight. Zbyszko Held His Own.

In the entire match last night Lewis, in the opinion of the fans, failed to show he is any superior to Zbyszko. The Pole, despite his 50 years, held his own with the champion throughout. Lewis' famous headlock did not seem to cause "Zbyszko" any distress whatever. During the whole match Lewis clamped on an even dozen of these locks, and Zbyszko broke every one without any great apparent effort—save only the one on which Lewis was awarded the only fall, and the referee gave him no time to break that one.

Several times Zbyszko seemed to have Lewis in considerable distress, principally using an arm lock and crotch hold, but the stranger also proved Davis court hoisted Lewis' hand. Zbyszko raised his own hand and the spectators yelled in delight. Zbyszko Held His Own.
